

ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Minimum entry grades: a grade 6 in English Language at GCSE.

“The art of communication is the language of leadership.”

Why study it?

It develops a number of skills that are useful in any walk of life, such as critical reading, data evaluation and the ability to develop and sustain an argument.

It is fascinating! Look at language development through a variety of perspectives: gender, child development, ethnicity and culture.

This subject is for you if...

- You have an analytical mind.
- You can think critically.
- You are a strong writer.
- You can work independently.
- You appreciate the power of words and language.

Where can it lead you?

The course can lead to degrees in a wide range of subjects.

The English Language A-level is particularly suited to those interested in journalism, education, marketing, law, psychology, history and sociology.