

RELIGIOUS STUDIES: PHILOSOPHY & ETHICS

*Minimum entry grades: a grade 6 in Religious Studies at GCSE.
A grade 6 in English would be an advantage.*

A-level Religious Studies helps students develop their interest in, and enthusiasm for a rigorous study of religion and its relation to the wider world.

Why study it?

It develops the transferable skill of critical thinking. Rated highly by employers, this skill will serve you well in all pursuits post A-level.

The topics covered are meaningful and will cause you to reflect upon the fundamental considerations of society.

This subject is for you if...

- You enjoy discussing the fundamental issues of life.
- You are interested in the religious and philosophical foundations of current thought.
- You would like to develop your ability to think deeply and form rounded arguments.

Where can it lead you?

The ability to think through issues within the workplace arises in every field from medicine to law, finance to social work.

Confident self-expression with an understanding of a wide range of viewpoints is good preparation for a variety of careers which require teamwork and individual initiative.
